FROM RESEARCH TO ENVIRONMENTAL JUSTICE

Central Valley Environmental Justice (EJ) organizations are hard at work advocating policy change to improve the health and well-being of California’s most vulnerable communities. Learn about their policy priorities for 2020–2021, and how research can help lead to lasting change.

Presentations on EJ policy priorities and potential partnerships with researchers, including these topics:

- Pesticide regulations
- Oil and gas drilling near communities
- Safe and affordable drinking water
- Hazardous waste disposal
- Air quality monitoring and mitigation
- How COVID-19 impacts EJ issues
- Disproportionate impacts of climate change

Hosted by the Community Engagement Core of the Environmental Health Sciences Center with presentations from our Community Stakeholder Advisory Committee (CSTAC).

Please join us if you’re a UC Davis scientist interested in understanding how your research impacts environmental health in California.

You’re especially encouraged to attend if you’re interested in applying for pilot project funding from the Environmental Health Sciences Center.

Following the webinar, researchers interested in pursuing partnerships on these topics will be invited to continued discussions with advocacy organizations in late September.

SEPTEMBER 8, 10–11 AM
OR SEPTEMBER 9, 2–3 PM

REGISTER HERE. FOR MORE INFORMATION VISIT ENVIRONMENTALHEALTH.UCDAVIS.EDU